"Parting their arctic anchors,
The boys came drifting by,
A fearful fleet for a ship to meet
Under the midnight sky;
Their sails are fathoms under,
Their prows are sharp as steel,
Their stroke, the crash of thunder,
All silently on they steal."

d you not the sound of guns then and then again !
uneasy icebergs roar burns in the frozen main."

"In the ruddy glow of daylight,
When the sea is clear and wide,
When the sun with a clear and gay light Gilds the avalanche's side ;
Then the sailor-boy sees castles
And cities fair to view,
With battlements and archways,
And horsemen riding through."
